Turmoil in the South

By TRUDE WEISS ROSMARIN

Jews Between Anvil and Hammer: Rabbis in the Middle

NEW YORK (CJN) — "All right, Reverends, what's your purpose?" asked Police Chief Laurie Pritchett of Albany, Georgia, of a group of 75 religious leaders from the New York area and from the Mid-west who had journeyed to the Southern stronghold of segregation for a "prayer vigil" invoking Divine aid for desegregation.

"Our purpose is to offer our prayers to God," a Protestant clergyman replied, while Rabbi Richard Israel of Yale University's Hillel Foundation intoned Psalm 114. The anti-segregationists stood firm and refused to disperse, whereupon the Police Chief ordered his men to take them to gaol.

Among those taken to prison were nine rabbis. They were not the first rabbis to champion desegregation, but the Albany Prayer Vigil marked the first large participation of Jewish spiritual leaders in on-the-spot protests against segregation.

Going to prison for civil rights has become sort of a badge of honour for progressive U.S. clergymen, since Governor Rockefeller's clergyman son-in-law went to a Southern gaol and declined preferential treatment. While the nine rabbis with recent "criminal records" have forfeited their chances of occupying pulpits in segregation-committed Southern cities, they have disproved charges that rabbis are not as willing as Christian clergymen to take personal risks for their civil rights convictions.

With respect to taking a militant stand on behalf of desegregation, Southern Jews and some of their rabbis argue that it is easy for "Northerners" to be vociferous and to demonstrate. "The worst that can happen to them is to spend a few days in gaol to the acclaim of the press and the magazines. Then they return to their pulpits and are acclaimed heroes. But we have to live with it," a rabbi from the Deep South told me recently. "I am no less a foe of segregation than the rabbis who participated in the Albany Prayer Vigil," he added. "However, if I were to make myself conspicuous as an anti-segregationist, I would jeopardise the welfare of my Jewish community."

There is agreement among Southern Jews that as a vulnerable minority they should keep out of "this" controversy. Economic reprisals against "nigger favouring" Jews and their communities, as well as acts of vandalism and violence against synagogues, Jewish centres and even cemeteries, have impressed Southern Jews with the fact that they must place their own safety above other considerations, particularly as their small numbers make them a weak ally of the Negro cause.

Notwithstanding strong Jewish sympathy for Negro equality, antisemitism is endemic to many Negro communities. According to a recent study by Rabbi Seymour J. Cohen, of Chicago's Anshe Emet Congregation, Negro Jew-hatred stems from the fact that businesses in New York's Harlem and in virtually all Coloured ghettoes are owned by Jews. Rabbi Cohen hopes for a "Negro-Jewish Dialogue," in the course of which Negroes should be reminded of Julius Rosenwald and of the so-called Jewish Unions' successful efforts to create equal opportunity for employment for Negroes in the needle trades.

American Negroes should be enlightened on the close ties between Israel and the new African States, Rabbi Cohen suggests. He also proposes that the Synagogue Council of America initiate steps for "dialogues" with Negro religious organisations.

It has just been announced that the Synagogue Council of America will be co-sponsor, with the National Council of Churches and the National Catholic Welfare Conference, of a "National Conference on Religion and Race" to be held next January. This is a good start for the "Negro-Jewish Dialogue."

MOSCOW OK'S EMIGRATION

CONFERENCE TO STRESS B. B. ROLE

The role of B'nai B'rith in International Affairs and the Israel Program will be featured at the 77th Semi-Annual Conference of the Eastern Canadian Council, B'nai B'rith, which will be held in Ottawa from November 2nd to the 5th, Arthur Diamond of Montreal, Chairman of the Conference Arrangements Committee, announced.

He said that over 500 delegates are expected to represent the one hundred and thirteen lodges and chapters in Ontario, Quebec and the Atlantic Provinces.

ARGENTINE NAZIS ARRESTED

BUENOS AIRES, (JCNS) — A promise that measures would be taken to curb "armed bands which divide the Argentine family" was given by Dr. Miguel Sussini, Argentina's Minister of Education and Justice.

TACUARA - Alberto Ignacio Ezcurra, 24, leader of the Argentine Nazi organization called Tacuara. On his lapel is Maltese cross insignia of the group.

He was replying to a protect by D.A.I.A., the representative body of Argentine Jewry, against recent attacks on Jewish schoolchildren by fascist gangs.

After last week's civil war when armed Tacuara gangs were active in Jewish quarters of this city, police made several arrests. Two of the arrested men were army officers. Another three — Tomas Ribarc, a Yugoslav, Alfredo Roca and Alberto Mansilla, Uruguyan — were described as Tacuara members anxious to make the most of the civil disorders.

ENVOY SAYS: NUMBER OF JEWS TO LEAVE

Special Wire To The Canadian Jewish News
By MURRAY FRANK

Washington, D.C. (JCNFS) — In what may become the beginning of the Soviet turning point vis à vis the Jewish question in the USSR, and in the Russian attitude towards Israel, the Embassy of the Soviet Union stated that Moscow may permit a number of Jews to "be united with their families" in other countries.

Georgi Kornienko, councellor of the Embassy of the USSR here told a Jewish delegation that henceforth his government would allow "a number" of its Jewish citizens to emigrate if they wish to be united with relatives living abroad. Mr. Kronienko also said that Israel is one of the "other countries" to which such emigration would be permitted.

The statement was made last week-end to a delegation of the organization of Jewish Nazi victims. The delegation, headed by Moses Sochaczewsky and Felix Lasky, both of New York, visited the embassy in order to acquaint the Soviet authorities with Jewish apprehensions about reports of antisemitism in the USSR.

Kornienko also told the Jewish delegation:

- The Soviet Union "is not hostile to Israel", but resents "Israel's leaning towards the West".
- Moscow will in the future allow rabbis and religious Jewish delegations to travel abroad in order to participate in Jewish conferences.

CANADIAN MISSION IN ISRAEL STIRRED BY VISIT

Israeli President Yitzhaq Ben Zvi conveyed good wishes to the people of Canada and urged Canadian Jewry to "Keep up the noble work of UJA to provide homes and a future for homeless and despoiled people now streaming to Israel", according to a report from Jerusalem.

Ben Zvi extended greetings to the Canadian Jewish Community on the occasion of the forthcoming New Year noting with its help "Fellow Jews will be sealed in the Book of Life".

This statement was made on the occasion when President and Mrs. Ben Zvi met with a delegation from Canada consisting of Mr. & Mrs. Ray D. Wolfe (Mr. Wolfe is Chairman of the Toronto U.J.A. 1963 Campaign); Mr. & Mrs. John D. Fienberg (Mr Fienberg is Chairman of the Board, United Jewish Welfare Fund, and Chairman of Campaign Services Committee of the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds.); Mr. & Mrs. W. Bernard Herman (Mr. Herman is a Community Leader and Treasurer of the Toronto Israel Bond Campaign); Mr. & Mrs. Sam Belzberg - Edmonton (Mr. Belzberg was former U.J.A., Chairman for Western Canada).

TOUR AREA

"Because of the massive immigration into Israel this past year and the rapid progress with the great new development projects, we have come to Israel to get the most up-to-date picture of the country's needs and problems," stated R. D. Wolfe, chairman of the 1963 Toronto United Jewish Appeal Campaign, back in Toronto. "Because our Campaign is dedicated to the greatest possible assistance in the history making project of refugee resettlement in Israel, we want to know the real facts and we want to report these facts to the Toronto Jewish Community."

The Canadian Mission toured the Arad area, the newest of the new development areas in the northern part of the Negev. In Haifa, the Mission witnessed the arrival of an immigrant ship carrying a large number of newcomers to Israel and accompanied them to their new homes.

Mr. Wolfe, speaking on behalf of the Mission, declared, "We have been stirred by recent developments in Israel and will transmit a first hand report upon our return. We know the community of Toronto will help through increased contributions to the 1963 Jewish Appeal."

Commentary • By M. J. Nurenberger

yom kippur thoughts

The Seer of Lublin, one of the great Hasidic masters, was wont to say:

I prefer one who knows that he is wicked to one who knows that he is righteous. For the saying — that the wicked do not repent, even at the gates of hell — applies to those who claim to be Tzadikim. They believe that their mission is to redeem the soul of others.

These "righteous men" are the ones who generally destroy what others build. Behind this self-righteousness lies the frustration the source of which is envy. To paraphrase Reb Israel Salanter, they are concerned always with their own body, but with the soul of others. Frequently it is difficult for me to understand how people who consider themselves pious ignore completely that which is the basis of Judaism: the commandments regulating the rules of society, respect for the truth and for their fellowmen.

We all know that the prayers of Yom Kippur, according to our sages, can bring about forgiveness for one's sins agains God only, not against man. For God has told us through the prophet, "If only it were that they would forsake Me but observe My laws."

Every year, on the eve of Yom Kippur, I peruse the Hofetz Hayim's famous volume on the halakha against the evil tongue. If only someone would subsidize a translation into English of the Hofetz Hayim's "Shmirat Halashon"! As it is, in rabbinic Hebrew this opus magnum of Jewish ethics is not available to just the people who should read it. For instance, I doubt whether anyone who disseminates lashon hara — orally or in print — has ever grasped the essence of Judaism no matter how pious he claims to be.

In "Shmirat Halashon", the Hofetz Hayim formulates this First Rule of the ban against the evil tongue:

"It is forbidden to spread stories affecting the integrity of his fellowmen, even if it is true. And this is what our rabbis of the Talmud consider evil tongue."

Psychologically the Hofetz Hayim is right. For any maniac who would stoop to a campaign of smear and villification, especially when he believes himself to be pious, is convinced that he is fighting for the truth. He would attack a man of good deeds because he, as the Seer of Lublin defines it, believes himself to be righteous. He believes that his soul is holy while that of the other man, whom he persecutes, is wicked.

Anyone active in public life is exposed to the evil tongue, be he a writer or a leader of his community. In fact, the more dedicated to his ideal, the more successful he is — the greater the danger of being villified.

The difference between Judaism and some other religions consists, I should say, of one point: We serve man. Judaism is not concerned with any other worship of God but by serving him who was created in His image. Thus Yom Kippur has meaning solely when one realizes that one's sins against man are not forgiven on the Day of Atonement until he obtains the pardon of his fellowman. This is Judaism. The rest is but commentary.

ISRAEL'S NEW YEAR

JERUSALEM (JCNFS) — This year Israelis exchanged over fifteen-million New Year greeting cards and nearly 1,500,000 people used buses to spend the holiday with relatives and friends. (The bus company placed an added 1,400 buses at commuters' disposal).

Machzorim and Shofarim were distributed to new immigrant settlements by the Ministry of Religious Affairs. Food establishments reported record sales throughout the entire country.

FULL SYNAGOGUE ATTENDANCE

A record number of worshippers attended services at all synagogues. Makeshift places of worship were erected from Metulla to Elath.

VARIOUS TRADITIONS

"Jewish" minorities followed their own traditions. About seven-thousand Karaites observed only the first day of the New Year, on Saturday. They held services at Moshav Mazliah at Ashdod and at Ramle.

One hundred and thirty Samaritans observed the second day, Sunday, at their new Holon Synagogue.

Neither of these communities uses a Shofar.

A Statement to Toronto's Jewish Community

Jewish Children Need Foster Homes

Recently the attention of the community has been drawn to the urgent request of the Jewish Family and Child Service for Jewish foster homes for children under the care of the agency.

This appeal was necessary because some Jewish children continue to be cared for in non-Jewish homes. The reason such placements were necessary is that the Jewish Family and Child Service has not been able to secure a sufficient number of Jewish homes for foster care placements.

The ultimate aim of the Jewish Family and Child Service on behalf of the Jewish community is for placement of all Jewish children in suitable Jewish Homes.

Because of malicious rumors with regard to this situation, the central organizations of the Toronto Jewish community, the Canadian Jewish Congress and the United Jewish Welfare Fund, think it is important to clarify the facts by way of this statement, on the basis of a thorough review and analysis in consultation with the Jewish Family and Child Service.

What are the facts?

- 28 children in foster homes were under the supervision of the Jewish Family and Child Service;
- 5 children of non-Jewish parents are under the supervision of the Jewish Family and Child Service while placed in non-Jewish foster homes.
- 23 were Jewish children under the direct care of the agency;
- Of the 23 Jewish children, 18 are in Jewish foster homes.
- Of the remaining 5 not in Jewish foster homes, one is an infant under five months; this infant will be placed in a Jewish adoptive home within the next two months.

The other 4 ranging in ages from 2 - 14 years are special problems as follows:

- Esther, age 2, seriously mentally retarded, a child of an unwed mother, requires special care prior to being placed into an institution for the mentally retarded.
- Sadie, age 3, mentally retarded, requires psychiatric treatment and a home that provides special care for a retarded child. This child has responded to treatment and will be ready for adoption by a Jewish family with six more months of continued treatment.
- David, age 7½, was placed as an infant at the age of three months in a non-Jewish foster home by his own mother. The Jewish Family and Child Service took over supervision of this home when David was two years of age and continued supervision until his mother's recent death. The agency program was limited for David because the emotionally disturbed mother refused to surrender custody to the agency and insisted that the child remain in the non-Jewish home. Wardship of this child came into the agency's hands only upon the mother's death. By this time medical psychiatric opinion judged that the child could not be moved from this home without severe emotional damage.
- Martin, a 14 year old, an emotionally disturbed boy from a broken home came from a Jewish community in Western Canada to receive psychiatric treatment in a local mental institution. On the basis of the excellent progress he was released on probation and the J.F.&C.S. was asked by the provincial officials to supervise his continued psychiatric treatment by a private psychiatrist. Martin required a specialized placement ,exceptional care that would ensure continued progress to enable him to be fully restored to health and normal living.

This is the situation as of October 1st. The review and analysis made in consultation with the Family and Child Service indicates that the situation as described with minor variations has been of this character over the years.

It is the unreserved conviction of the United Jewish Welfare Fund and the Canadian Jewish Congress that the Jewish Family and Child Service has maintained and continues to maintain a basic policy of placing Jewish children under care of the agency in Jewish foster homes. Exceptions to this policy occurred in special situations due to the temporary lack of suitable homes or other special circumstances beyond the control of the agency.

A claim has been made that the Jewish community has a need for an orphanage to house children for whom Jewish foster homes can not be secured. The central Jewish agencies reaffirm their complete endorsement of the J. F. & C. S policy that the foster home method for care of children under agency supervision is the only sound way to provide for children for whom the community is required to give temporary care. This conclusion was reached by the Jewish community when it closed the doors of the Jewish orphanage approximately 30 years ago. Furthermore, governmental and private agencies concerned with the care of children endorse foster home care and consistently operate under this policy.

A foster home care program is considered the only real effective way of caring for children who need a home with love, with kindness and sympathy and with a genuine feeling of wanting children. Experience has repeatedly demonstrated that no orphanage, no institutionalized shelter can ever match the results achieved in a supervised, warm, family atmosphere.

In view of charges levelled at the Jewish Family and Child Service within the past two weeks in the Jewish community, it is important to note that of the 28 children placed in foster homes, only one was an orphan and that orphan has been in a Jewish home at all times. The remaining 27 are in foster homes, under the temporary care of this agency.

These are facts — and the attacks upon the Jewish Family and Child Service and community leadership are not only unwarranted but a "Hillul Hashem" since they are based upon misinformation; lack of knowledge of the facts; a proposal to revert to practices for child care that are outmoded and rejected by the Jewish and non-sectarian and governmental child care services.

For more than half a century, the Jewish Family and Child Service and its predecessor organization has served our community with devotion and dedication and because of this record, is held in high esteem both in the Jewish and total community here in Toronto and across the entire continent.

This record of distinguished performance achieved by the Jewish Family and Child Service is a tribute to the cooperative efforts of the members of the community who have provided the necessary financial support; the leaders from every group in the community, Orthodox, Conservative and Reform, who constitute the Board of Directors, and guide its policies and program; the numerous community members who work with diligence on Committees for the Aged, for Child Care, for Family Counselling, etc., and the staff.

But a need exists for more foster homes, for more Jewish children, despite the warm response of many Jewish families. There is a need for foster homes — open your hearts and homes to a child.

DATELINE: HAMILTON

AS I SEE IT

By PAUL HANOVER

It has to be at least two years since Sol Minden has been after me for a game of golf. Now get this — I don't even play the game! So that shows you how desperate he must be to find somebody he can beat. Anyhow the foursome was arranged. Sol, Syd Stein, Chuck Matchen, and The novice, me. I don't have any equipment either, but Chuck came to the rescue. He took me out to his station wagon (you see neither of us are members of Beverley) and there he set me up. First, the shoes: a half-size too small, but that didn't discourage me; then, a jacket — a size too big, but that didn't discourage me; then out came the clubs. Now I was discouraged! These clubs looked like the ones W. C. Fields used in that memorable picture that introduced Bob Hope to the world of movies, Thanks For The Memory. These things were completely rusted, all except the handles. They weren't rusted because they were hickory! Wooden handled clubs yet! And the bag was a torn, stained, mouldy canvas job. The whole set looked as though it longed to get back into the window of Isaac Steinberg's second hand store. Chuck insisted they were good luck equipment. "My father used them to win the open title in southern Roumania!" Actually, the whole getup was a gag which about everybody appreciated as we strolled into the posh clubhouse — everybody but Marvin Goldblatt who was absolutely flabbergasted. So much so, he took me aside and insisted I use his equipment, to which I quickly agreed. So, all in all, it was a fruitful afternoon. I used Chuck Matchen's, shoes, Marv Goldblatt's clubs (AND balls), Sol Minden's green fees and Syd Stein's charge account number. The only thing they wouldn't let me use was Hersh Goldhar's score card. They did let me use the caddy for the odd tee shot, especially the 14th. And I did wind up with another cute golf story from Chuck: the one about the golf bug warming up on the practice green when a car pulls up, brakes screeching. Out jumps a gal garbed completely in white, wearing a veil and holding a bridal bouquet. "Where have you been", she screeches. He takes a quick look at her and resumes his swing, saying: "I told you — only if it rains!"

I don't know how Dave Mitchnik made out in the annual lawyer's tournament the next day, but I did see him that same day doing the course with his son. Sneaky practice session, eh Dave? . . . We were joined on the final hole by Doc Carr and Dave Rosenberg. "There's still the odd membership open", said the Doc. "You don't expect me to join now, do you?" I complain. "Why not?" says I "Why not"? "When I walked downstairs to the locker room, I noticed the broadloom which was starting to wear out.

Well, one thing about that new marquee set-up Messrs. Walman and Greenbaum put up on their Main West at Queen Income Investments Building! It sure busts one set of opinions. Looks as though, after all, they WILL give you the time of day! . . . And how about that new neon sign of Harold Back's at his Dumont Aluminum? Now my problem is — is that the temperature reading, or your current interest rate? . . . No, Virginia. Tiger Cat star Joe Zuger is no relative to Irving. You see, the one is a kicker and the other is a . . . how do you spell that?

ISRAEL SECURITIES BIG SELLER ON WALL STREET

TEL AVIV, (CJN) — Over $20m. worth of Israeli securities and shares have been sold in U.S. during the past five years by Brager and Company,. a Wall Street firm specializing in Israeli issues.

To enable the Company to cope with the increasing business, it is doubling its present share capital by selling an additional $500,000 worth of stock to the P.E.C.-Israel Economic Corporation. it was anounced here by Messrs, Harry Brager, who remains President of the enlarged firm; Joseph Meyerhoff, President of P.E.C., who becomes President of the Board of the enlarged Brager and Co.; John Furman, Executive Vive-President of P.E.C. and its magager in Israel. and Dr. Avraham Neeman. Managing Director of the Industrial Development Bank. Also attending the press conference was the Minister of Commerce and Industry, Mr. Pinhas Sapir. ,

SECOND $10M. ISSUE

Mr. Sapir pointed out that Brager and Co. had already sold $9.3m worth of the I.D.B.'s first $10m. share issue, and would begin sales of another $10m. worth in a month. "Most people didn't believe it could be done when we first met Mr. Brager a couple of years ago, but they did it", the Minister said.

In addition to the I.D.B. shares marketed by Mr. Brager's firm another $10m. worth of stock in the American Israel Paper Mills, the Alliance Tire and Rubber Co., and the Hotel Corporation of Israel (owners of the Sheraton Tel Aviv) have been sold by the firm.

SECOND $10m. ISSUE NO SENTIMENT INVOLVED

Mr. Brager said that shares in Israel firms were selling in the U.S. on strictly financial, not sentimental grounds. They pay a higher dividend rate than most securities quoted, but their principal atraction was the appreciation in value, on which less income tax is paid than on dividends.

The P.E.C. will now open new branches in Philadelphia, Boston, and Los Angeles. Mr. Meyerhoff noted that the P.E.C.'s new half interest in the enlarged Brager and Company would enable it to handle other Israeli shares as well.

Anxious Father

DR. ROSE N. FRANZBLAU

QUESTION: My daughter, 9, has gone through quite a bit. Her mother died when she was 6. My late wife was very loving and demonstrative.

Shortly after my daughter's birth my wife became ill. Fortunately my wife was not a nagger or complainer in front of the child. She was a perfectionist. Our daughter has inherited many of her artistic traits and her love of the arts.

When my wife died the child took it very hard. My mother and her husband took my daughter south. This arrangement did not work. Ordinarily an obedient child, she became very difficult.

After a few months I brought her back. The woman I hired to take care of her was too lenient, but my daughter liked her, so I kept her. I felt another change might be harmful.

While she was away, I started dating my present wife. Even though we wanted to marry sooner, we agreed to wait until my child was ready for a new mother.

My wife is firm, fair and loving but not demonstrative. Her results have been gratifying. The child is more sociable. Her report card shows superior marks in everything, including oral expression.

My concern is with our daughter's inability to express herself.

She keeps her problems to herself.

She plays well with other children.

My wife feels you can't make her into another person. I feel professional guidance can improve my daughter.

ANSWER: Considering all that your child has gone through, she has made a remarkable adjustment.

To a young child, the death of a mother is not only a hurt and loss, but a sign of insufficient love. If the parent had loved her enough, she feels, she would have overcome the illness somehow, and stayed with her.

*You can be sure that your little girl per*ceived that something was amiss with her mother from the undue concern shown her. By the time her mother died, she had already gone through plenty of ups and downs, which included loving concern for her mother, along with great hostility.

Under such circumstances, it is natural that any child would act up and so act out her grief. In her misbehavior and temper outbursts the child achieves release from her fears and tests her acceptance by the adults in the new family. When she isn't rejected and cast out after such tantrums and disobediences, she somehow feels better about herself.

The return to her father and the home she knew was, of course, a reassuring experience. But her grandparents did not accompany her. This was again a partial rejection of her. As she saw it, she was never quite acceptable and wanted on her own terms. It was always to suit the convenience of the elders.

Finally, the housekeeper, who was like a substitute mother to her, also had to be given up. The change was made to suit her father's wishes and convenience and not hers.

Your present wife must be allowed to rear the child her way, particularly if you feel that it is basically a loving and considerate way. You cannot expect her to continue the pattern of childrearing used by your first wife.

Your child should not be required to become a replica of her mother so as to keep her memory alive.

The atmosphere which the adults in your present home have established, as well as her achievements at school, her interest in the arts, and her ability to play well with other children, indicate that your daughter has made a very superior adjustment.

The pressure within yourself which affects your child would be relieved and released if you went for some psychological counseling.

NEW SYNAGOGUE IN LEGHORN

Rome (JCNS) A new synagogue designed by Signor Angelo Dicastro, a Roman architect, was consecrated in Leghorn on Sunday.

The synagogue stands on the site of the famous baroque synagogue, which was one of the town's principal attractions and which was totally destroyed by wartime bombing. On the same day a ceremony will be held proclaiming Leghorn and Bat Yam in Israel as "sister cities".

KATZ FUNERAL

HAIFA, (JCNS) — The funeral of Mane-Katz, the noted French Jewish painter who died on Friday in Tel Aviv, took place here. Artists, writers, painters and a large crowd payed him a last honour, passing before his coffin which laid in the main Municipal hall.

The Mayor of Haifa, Aba Chushy, paid tribute to his great talent and recalled the outstanding place he occupied in the world of painting and at Montparnasse (the Paris capital of artists).

The many works belonging to Mane-Katz are to be brought from his Paris studio and will be exhibited permanently in the villa on Mount Carmel which the Municipality built for the painter and which is to become now a Museum.

What is the Public Relations Board and what has it to do with M.C.F. & G.?

• PRB — as it is informally known — is the Public Relations affiliate company of Muter, Culiner Frankfurter & Gould Limited. This raises the question many people ask: "What is public relations?" The question is best answered by Sam Crystal, who is the Managing Director of the Public Relations Board: "Public relations sells. It brings companies, products, and ideas before the public in such a way that they win public support."

• Before joining us, Sam was for 16 years on the staff of the Toronto "Telegram" starting at an early age as a copy boy, and finally as an editor. As the driving force of PRB he is responsible, with his staff, for the public relations activities of such fine firms as: Oshawa Wholesale Limited, Levy Industries, Federal Farms, Men's Clothing Manufacturers Association of Ontario, Culligan of Canada, The Dale Estate Limited, Shopsy Foods Ltd., Tip Top Tailors Ltd., Canadianwide Properties Ltd., Cadillac Construction Ltd., Roneo Co. of Canada, Seaway Hotels Ltd., Holiday Sportswear and others.

• Sam Crystal has the kind of reputation in the public relations field which has to be hard earned. Integrity is the main ingredient in the recipe for this kind of reputation.

Extradition demanded

Rome (JCNS) Gerhard Kroeger, a former Nazi army officer, has been arrested by Italian police in Bologna, where he was on holiday, and the West German Government has asked the Italian authorities to extradite him.

A criminal court in West Germany wants to try Kroeger, who is accused of having ordered mass executions of soldiers and civilians on Russian territory in 1941.

MESSAGE FROM SALTFLEET

TOWNSHIP WANTS "ONE BIG RELIGION"

The Ontario Public School Trustees' Association—an organization devoted to the interest of the public school as opposed to the tax-supported Catholic Separate School-is holding its annual convention in Sarnia at the end of this month.

One of the resolutions coming before the conference, while no doubt well-intended has an operative clause that on first reading—and even on second—has a sinister sound. After a series of four or five "whereas'es" deploring the tendency to have separate schools split away from the common school, the disunity it tends to create it reads as follows:

"'Whereas religion and education should be unifying influence upon the people of this great province of Ont.; Therefore be it resolved that the Trustee Board of Saltfleet Public School Area No. 2 petitions the Provincial Legislature through the Minister of Education to establish a Royal Commission for the purpose of investigating the whole educational organization of this province with a view to determining what changes should be made to the various governing Acts so that unity of Education, unity of Purpose, unity of Program, unity of Religion, unity of Economics will once more prevail".

Unity of religion? Do the proponents of the motion (the Saltfleet Township School Area trustees) expect Anglicans, Moslems, Sabbatarians, Pentecostals, Jews, Mennonites and Catholics to become One Big Religion? Or—what?

THANK YOU, MR. YAREMKO!

SCRUTINIZING "FOREIGN" NAMES

One of the side issues that arose at the current Royal Commission on Crime that received scant attention, except by way of incidental mention in one of the dailies, is a certain peculiar practice that was prevalent up to recent times in the procedure of taking out a charter for a club or organization.

When there were among the signators of such charters persons bearing "foreign" names it was customary for the Provincial Secretary's office to refer these to the R.C.M.P. for investigation. Why this was so is rather difficult to see. Surely subversive or criminal tendencies existed at various levels in this province before there was such a thing as "foreign" names among the inhabitants, if indeed there ever was such a time. It is hard to believe that the law enforcement agencies of this dominion and province were ever naive enough to conceive that a special check should be necessary on those racially or ethnically outside the "Establishment" — a check considered superfluous for those who came from "acceptable" backgrounds and who bore names like Smith and Jones (which might, incidentally, stand for Kowalczuk or Januszewski).

Fortunately John Yaremko, when he took over the Provincial Secretaryship, was having none of this. He saw no reason why all signators should not be investigated or none at all; certainly it should not be done on the basis of surname or place of birth. We are somewhat perturbed to learn that this practice survived as long as it did, and relieved that, thanks to the vigilance of Mr. Yaremko, it is now a thing of the past.

VICTORY AGAINST BIAS

NEW YORK CHALLENGES SAUDI ARABIA

The New York State Commission for Human Rights ordered the New York office of the Arabian American Oil Company to stop refusing to hire Jews because of creed or ancestry.

The American Jewish Congress, which has been pressing for a legal ban hiring practices for the last 12 years, immediately hailed the order as a "historic step forward."

The order, announced by Commissioner George H. Fowler also prohibits the company from using various employment application forms that imply directly or indirectly that certain creeds or ancestry are pre-conditions for hiring.

Among the forms specificly banned was the application for a Saudi-Arabian visa, which contains questions about faith and national origins.

The oil company, which is also known as Aramco, has used the visa forms for personnel expected to work in Saudi Arabia. It has done so on orders from the Saudi government.

The commission's decision was unanimous. It was signed by the Presiding Commissioner, J. Edward Conway, and Commissioners Bernard Katzen and Mary Louise Nice.

After acknowledging that the Saudi Government had the right to bar Jews from its territory, the decision said:

"It may not, however, empower the respondent (Aramco) to ask prohibited questions and exclude Jewish persons from employment here in New York. If the issue is of such great importance to Saudi Arabia, it must pursue its disreputable course from start to finish and process its visas as it will. It may not choose this respondent as its 'cat's paw'."

The order also called on the oil company to show evidence during the next fifteen days that it has complied with the commission's rulings.

Would it be appropriate if we here, in Canada, investigated similar practices by foreign companies operating here?

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

U. S. MISSILES FOR ISRAEL

Last week-end, following the sensational disclosure by Washington of the dispatch of U.S. missiles to Israel, the State Department stressed that the United States had no intention of attempting to maintain permanently a military balance in the Middle East.

However, the plans to permit the negotiation of sales to Israel of Hawk anti-aircraft missiles were confirmed. The missiles, manufactured by the Raytheon Company of Waltham, Mass., for the Army, have a ground-to-air range of 38,000 feet.

State Department spokesmen emphasized that the United States response to Israeli arms requests was limited to the current situation.

The United States, it was pointed out, had been convinced by Israeli representatives that the Soviet-supplied arms for the United Arab Republic disturbed the balance of power in the Middle East and caused a situation that could lead to hostilities.

Officials stressed, however, that the United States was not assuming the continuing responsibility of maintaining the miltary balance. A spokesman said that the United States had no intention of becoming "a major supplier" of weapons to the Middle East.

State Department spokesmen said that some countries in the Middle East had been "informed" in advance of the United States' plans to permit sales of the anti-aircraft missiles to Israel. It was assumed that the United Arab Republic had been one of these countries.

The New York Times, while hailing this American move "after long hesitation", notes that "it is a reversal of the policy not to provide substantial American arms to any nation in the Middle East."

The Times also states:

"The necessity for sending this equipment to Israel is especially regrettable because it extends the arms race at a time when the United States is urging general disarmament. But there is no challenging the necessity itself, and Soviet Russia must accept full responsibility for creating it. As in the whole East-West struggle, the peace of the Middle East, however precarious, depends on balance of power in the area. The balance has been deliberately upset by the U.S.S.R. with the bombers, rockets and even submarines it is delivering to the United Arab Republic. As the Arab states continue to proclaim their determination to drive Israel into the sea, these offensive arms are a definite threat to peace. They could encourage the Arabs to launch their war of extermination, and they could force Israel into a "preventive" war before it is hopelessly outclassed.

"In this situation Israel, like the West on a large stage, must look to its defenses. The missiles, designed as weapons against bombers, are to be part of them."

For the Israelis, and to their friends abroad, this gesture shall also act as a reminder about the facts of life: they should realize who their friends are.

THE DAY OF ATONEMENT

The ancient world of the Greeks lasted about four hundred years, then lapsed into silence, never to regain its former creative glory.

The Babylonians, Hittites, Phoenicians, Persians, Romans and Philistines, all had their hour of greatness and then sank into silence or total darkness.

But the Hebrews, according to their friends, and more importantly, according to their enemies, have the vitality today that they had in the days of their prophets, the same vigor that they exhibted even during the period of captivity in Babylon, and the Day of Atonement, which Jews everywhere in the world observe this week may be a reason for a vigor that has never diminished.

The idea of the Day of Atonement, which has played an important role in Judaism's daughter religious, Christianity and Islam, established the concept of a reconciliation with God as the result of sincere repentance and the purification of mankind. The object lesson was carefully worded:

"If one says, 'I will sin, and the Day of Atonement will bring me forgiveness;' The Day of Atonement will bring him no forgiveness. . . . For the sins of man against God, the Day of Atonement atones;

"But for sins against one's neighbor, it does so only after one has first become reconciled to him."

Thus the idea of atonement, unknown to the great civilizations of Greece, Rome, and the countless others, may very well have been the agency for the religious and moral regeneration that has resulted in an unbroken tie with history for four thousand years.

YOM KIPPUR STORY

By DR. S. BROWN

In Germany After The Rescue...

The year 1947, the place Poppendorf; an anonymous, characterless spread of dwellings in rural North Germany, dragged from its anonymity for a brief moment by the passing Jew, who, as in hundreds of similar places all over the world, has left the mark of his presence as an everlasting testimony of human dignity as well as intolerance.

Here, as in neighbouring and equally insignificant Am Stau, had been set up two camps to receive the "Exodus" wanderers who had been brought back from Israel to Germany. Unwilling voyagers in their journey, sullen, silent and suspicious as they tasted once more the bitterness, the irony of their return to the land soaked with the blood of their own kin.

Surrounded, this time by the stiff-lipped and somewhat bewildered British Tommy, they nevertheless viewed their immediate plight as an extension of that incarceration from which they sought refuge and forgetfulness. Through the heavy wire one could see the boary aged and the innocent young standing about or pacing nowhere, glancing scornfully one moment at the hurrying civilian or soldier, caught up in the officialdom of the hour, a universe away on the other side of the wire, and the next at the watchtowers, cold, bristling sentinels, merciless and their grim, gaunt aloofness.

At the entrance to this emotionfilled enclosure, on Erev Shabbat Shuva, stood two British officers, correct, cleanly clad, neatly buttoned, their appearance contrasting oddly with the makeshift, casual garb of those whose minds were taken with matters and thoughts of greater moment — the one, a beared, lively-eyed half-colonel, the other a clerical-collar adorned major. Strange figures these to both guard and guarded. British uniforms and Shields of David! — few recognised the insignia of the Jewish Chaplains in the keyed-up uncertainty of the moment.

At that time in Germany the Jewish Hospitality Committee still maintained two Jewish clubs: one a hotel at Brunswick, near the American-Russian checkpoint, the other a country club at Nienburg by the River Weser. Rosh Hashana services had been held at both, to a full and mixed congregation of soldiers, para-military civilians, Control Commission personnel and Military Government officials, as well as a sprinkling of the "Shayrit Haplayta," coldly designated in the jargonese of officialdom as D.P.s. To one of these services had come the Senior Jewish Chaplain from London, who now with his "aide-de-camp" stood before the vigilant guards and might well have presented his credentials with Joseph's words: "I seek my brothers."

Without great delay, but not without curious stares, we were allowed to wend our way inside through a maze of wire. Not in our wildest dreams could we have imagined our present situation. Like two fugitives we stood with our backs to the gates, surrounded by a semi-circle of threatening faces, which paid but little heed to our weakly uttered "Shaloms!" and which gave no sign of recognition of our words in Yiddish, seeking to be taken to their spokesmen. For long-drawn-out seconds, forty or fifty at most but like as many days in our anxiety, we remained helplessly at bay, almost determined to depart, admitting failure in face of the bitterness we encountered.

At last, from one side, a young man in open-necked white shirt, with face serious and drawn, approached, and in curt Hebrew asked us what we wanted. Relief must have shown on our faces, for having received our reply that we had come to offer any help that could possibly be given, he quietly turned and led us through the growing assembly of people, which now, sensing friendship rather than intrusion, us pass.

respectfully made way to let

We walked in single file, an odd procession, picking up other young men, almost like a guard, as we continued towards a squat and ugly wooden hut. Into its dark, cheerless interior we made our way without speaking and found ourselves in a bare, uninviting room, empty of all furniture or fittings except for a few upturned crates, upon which were already seated a nameless "reception committee" of some five or six.

Greeting having been exchanged, somewhat reservedly, we perched ourselves upon some empty boxes and talked. We searched for words. We offered no sympathy, none was expected. We spoke haltingly, almost painfully of what those brief moments of freedom had been like in Israel. We spoke of the past, the present and the future, but mostly of the future. The minutes ticked by, and our conversation grew warmer and friendlier, and as we exchanged confidences in Yiddish and Hebrew an occasional smile would steal, almost guiltily, across their faces.

But this was rare. Rather did we listen, tense and pent-up, to the saga of courage and sadness of those who had wandered in this new "exodus," and the words of the Kol Nidre service, I will recall, ran fleetingly through my mind: "Listen to my voice and see my tear-filled eyes, champion my cause, regard my plea and answer me, "Salachti," so that to this day, whenever these words are recited in the staid, formal congregational atmosphere, I see, and probably always shall, the picture of that empty room, with figures bent, as if in conspiratorial consultation, calmly recounting a tale of exile.

The semi-darkness and the lowered voices seemed to be part of some remote, detached world suspended in time, intangible as a dream, into which the reality of snatches of outside conversation and the casual sounds of passing people would burst from time to time to remind us of the present.

For an hour or more we communed with men whose lives were so far from our own, but whose beings were so close, until slowly and hesitatingly we rose from our places, reluctant to sever a bond, aware of the closeness of the difference between those for whom the gates would open and those for whom they must remain closed. We shook hands—all round, a gesture of our feelings rather than a formality, and without further words we filed into the open, struck by the contrast of the sunshine and sadness of the prison in a field.

The final wrench was yet to come. From amidst a knot of people standing together some distance away there emerged a figure, a white-bearded "zakayn", aged but not bent, with face wrinkled and sea-browned, gaunt and haunting, who with determined eye made his way in our direction. We stopped in our tracks as he came on, and turned towards him as if to walk to meet him. He gently waved his hand for us to stay where we were, while he continued on his path. In a moment or two he stood before us. "Rebbe", he said, without a trace of pleading or seeking in his voice, "Mir brauchen lecht far Yom Kippur."

The sound of his voice and the impact of his words have branded themselves into the pattern of memories of these Days of Awe and have become, for me, a symbol of that Atonement towards which men must ever reach if they are at all to be worthy of God's forgiveness.

From The Publishers

A Propos...

Dear Reader:

The Jewish New Year period, beginning with Rosh Hashanah and ending with Hoshanah Rabbah, is the time for soul searching, self analysis and an earnest review of one's past actions. As is the case with a group or an organization, so is it in the life of an individual. We, the publishers of The Canadian Jewish News representing civic-minded persons on the Board of Directors of this paper, feel that this is an opportune moment to chat with our readers about their newspaper.

We are confident that our readers consider this newspaper their own. A newspaper is not a business in the ordinary sense of the word even though, in our modern age and "jet society", a publication must be conducted as any other business in order to succeed. A newspaper can only thrive if it remains independent and satisfies the needs of its readers and of the community.

In our case we, the shareholders, members of the Board of Directors and officers of The Canadian Jewish News, have clarified our objectives from the very outset: this is a newspaper like any other but, in addition, it is definitely a periodical with an ideal and purpose. Our sole objective is to fashion a well informed public opinion among the members of the Jewish community; to disseminate news; to report conscientiously the march of events insofar as it affects our people. Although we operate The Canadian Jewish News as a business, this is not, by any means, the principal objective. The business has been created in order that the spirit and the ideals of the publishers of the newspaper be sustained. The continuous growth of The Canadian Jewish News — reflecing the opinion of Jew and non-Jew alike — is the result of its complete independence and its objectivity in honest and accurate reporting.

As we review the past year, we admit to some unavoidable errors of judgment. Publishers and editors of a newspaper are the product of human society which is in continuous, ever-moving search for the truth. In the process of this pursuit of truth and facts, one may err. In general terms, however, when the balance sheet of The Canadian Jewish News is drawn, you, the reader, will agree that we have succeeded in our principal objective: to create a good newspaper both from the point of view of disseminating information and from the standpoint of analysis of events.

In the coming year we shall continue to carry on accordingly. We shall strive for the best and, in this pursuit of our aims to make The Canadian Jewish News an even better newspaper, we invite you, dear reader, to participate.

The editors and publishers welcome suggestions, letters, criticisms and new ideas. We are deeply appreciative of this moral aid on the part of the reader for whom this paper has been created and for whom it is published.

A Happy New Year and a G'mar Tov to all.

Yours sincerely,

J. I. OELBAUM, M. W. GASNER

SERMON FOR THE WEEK

THE MEANING, NOT THE SONG

When Moses saw that his days were numbered he became anxious that his lifelong preaching should not be forgotten. He therefore sought a suitable means for epitomising its main gist in a form which would remain inexorably in the minds and hearts of ever recalcitrant Israel. To suit his purpose he could find nothing better than the song form. This weekly Reading of the Law was in ancient terms a song in verse meant to be sung in order that its message might the better be remembered. Prose would not leave such an indelible mark. Thus, for neither the first nor the last time (witness contemporary commercial TV) a song was used as a means of promoting and furthering an idea.

All ideas, needless to say, are not on the same level. We cannot for one moment even contemplate the melodic rendering of an injunction to observe the Law of God as being in the same sphere as a jocular jingle advertising some commodity. Nevertheless, whenever song is substituted for cold prose — the prime vehicle of reason and understanding — we are in the presence of potential danger. "There are halls in the heavens above that open but to the voice of song", said the mystics; but the fact remains that whilst music can lead to heights it can also guide to depths. The Song of Moses remains as a glorious testimonial to a brilliant idea, but the song has often been used, and is being used today, for far less noble ends.

It is, of course, true that prose also can misguide and misdirect. It is easier, however, to sing certain inferior phrases or slogans than to say them. The language of prose, while not an inevitable safeguard to wantonness, invariably acts as a brake.

Moses used the vehicle of song that his message might be remembered. The Jew in the modern world tends to use song as means of ignoring any possible content in what is sung. Especially at this time of the year, what Zangwill has called the "minor keys of Atonement" can, if we let them, precisely because of their haunting overtones and nostalgic nuances, completely overshadow any possible literal or rational meaning that our Penitential liturgy might possess. To sing - and in Hebrew, moreover - what amounts to a challenge to our innermost conscience, is a dangerous risk. We might be left with the husk and utterly lose the kernel.

These Holydays are a call to all human faculties. Mind and heart, reason and emotion, together seek wholeness with God. The intellectual approach alone is at worst incomplete, but the purely melodic approach can at worst be utterly sterile and barren. We must speak with God as well as sing for Him.

CONSUL GENERAL AT ZIONIST LUNCHEON CLUB

On October 10th, at 12:15 p.m., the Toronto Zionist Council Luncheon Club will commence the new season with a luncheon at the Zionist Center, 651 Spadina Avenue. Guest of honor will be Mr. David Z. Rivlin, the newly appointed Consul General of Israel to Montreal.

After several years as a journalist and radio commentator, Mr. Rivlin, who was born in Jerusalem and stems from a large family which settled there 155 years ago, established the broadcasting station of the Israel Army and served as its program director.

During World War II, Mr. Rivlin served with the voluntary Jewish Brigade of the British Army and later undertook several missions on behalf of the "Haganah" to the Jewish concentration centers.

In 1958 he entered the Israeli Foreign Service and represented his government as Consul to New York and Philadelphia which appointment he relinquished upon his coming to Canada in mid-1962.

FARBAND CALL FOR "HALUTZIM"

The 47th Annual Conference of the Farband Labor Zionist Order of Toronto, which has just concluded its sessions, re-affirmed its adherence to the Labor Zionist program, its dedication to the State of Israel, a commitment to expand its cultural and educational institutions, and a determination to participate more fully in the affairs of the community generally and in the Jewish community particularly.

The outgoing chairman, Harry Weinstock, issued a call for more "chalutzim" in the work of Farband. Executive director Leo J. Moss in his address on basic policy and purpose, spoke of the need for informing the community more fully of the activities, the aims and achievements of Farband.

He went on, "The Farband is unique amongst national Jewish fraternal organizations, in that its total program embraces, under one roof, all of the Zionist interests, cultural and education activities, all of the mutual benefits found amongst a variety of other Jewish groupings. This imposes hardships, because heavy demands of time and money are ofttimes made on the membership. Their generous response is evident in the excellent results produced. Whether it be for Israel Bonds, U.J.A., J.N.F. or the Israel Histadrut Campaign, the Farband is always in the forefront of these endeavours."

The conference luncheon attended by some 175 delegates and observers, heard Dr. S. B. Hurwich, National Chairman of the Canadian Labor Zionist Movement, speak in praise of Nachman Lovinsky and Max Manson for their many years of endeavour on behalf of Israel and the Jewish people.

Amongst resolutions adopted: (1) "To combat resurgence of anti-Semitic and Nazi Activities" throughout the world, which instructed the Farband representatives to the Canadian Jewish Congress "to deal with these matters immediately and effectively." (2) "Maximum Jewish Education," asserting the Labor Zionist belief that every form of Jewish education is positive and must be supported, "but particularly do we re-affirm our support of a broadly based Hebrew national education, as embodied in the curriculum of our own Jewish Folk School and Bialik Hebrew Day School."

The final resolution took cognizance of the Farband 50th Jubilee Convention, scheduled to take place in New York in 1963. The Conference delegates undertook to increase the strength of the organization "by a net gain of at least 200 new members," and to support to the full the broad program of Forband's interests and activities, which includes all Israel fund drives, the Farband Folk choir, lecture and study series, Bible course, Jewish Folk School, Bialik Hebrew Day School, Camp Kvutz, Canadian Jewish Congress, Jewish Home for the Aged, Jewish Public Library and the Bureau of Jewish Education.

Officers elected for the ensuing year include: Lipa Wise, Chairman of the City Committee; Hye Kirshenbaum, vice-chairman; Dave Cooper, Secretary; Aaron Sadoff, Financial-Secretary; Nachman Lovinsky, Treasurer. Leo J. Moss is the Executive Director for Ontario and upstate New York. The Inner Executive includes as well past chairmen Kalmen Berger, George Steinhouse and the immediate past chairman, Harry Weinstock. Membership co-chairmen are Allan Cohen and Albert Schwab. Co-chairmen of the Cultural Committee are L. Lunsky and J. Altman.

CANADIAN CHAPTER, IMA

The Canadian Chapter of the Israel Medical Association conducted a general meeting last Monday evening at the Baycrest Hospital.

Dr. E. Sinai, chairman of the Central Committee of the IMA, who is spending several days with Mrs. Sinai in Toronto, was guest speaker. A well-known ophthalmologist, practising for many years in Tel Aviv, he is active in medical affairs in Israel.

The Canadian Chapter, which now has a membership of over 230, is part of a worldwide non-resident Fellowship of the IMA whose purpose it is to further closer ties with Israel's doctors and to aid the IMA in its many tasks.

FOLKSFAREIN • by Rabbi J. Kelman

One time of the year when everyone is conscious of his status as a Jew is the period of Rosh Hashono/Yom Kippur. Nearly everyone makes preparations to attend a Religious Service and senses the mood of these Holy Days. It is necessary to establish a mood of preparation in advance, so that these days will have meaning.

Included in the category of both congregations and worshippers are a large share of the patients of the Ontario Hospital on Queen Street. There services are held every week on Thursday, which contain elements of both the Daily and the Sabbath Services. For Rosh Hashono special arrangements will be made to permit those patients who are eligible for weekend passes to go to families or relatives. Other patients will remain in the hospital. However, in order to make sure that they will know that Rosh Hashono is coming, special services will be held on the Thursday prior to the holidays. As in every synagogue that day, Shofer will be sounded; other appropriate prayers and blessings will be added.

As usual, the volunteers of the Folks Farein will be on hand to do their share in making the morning service and programme outstanding in the mind of the patients. This group headed by Mr. David Green will make sure that special foods, New Year's Greeting cards; cigarettes, will have a High Holy Day motif. The work of the Folks Farein volunteers is recognized by all in contributing to the welfare of patients in this and other mental institutions in Ontario. The public is invited to share in this holy work by volunteering their help and time. Anyone interested in so doing should contact the Hebrew National Association (Folks Forein).

THEATRE HI-LIGHTS

● The Canadian Opera Company will present four operas during its fourteenth annual season to be held at Toronto's O'Keefe Centre from October 13th to 27th.

General Director of Canada's only national opera company, Herman Geiger-Torel, has scheduled the season to provide the most unusual in musical treats. Each operatic production has its own conductor, director, set and costume designer.

Canadian singer Teresa Stratas will have the leadrole in Puccini's "Madame Butterfly". Ernesto Barbini will conduct, while stage direction will be under Andrew Macmillan. The sets for Madame Butterfly" are by Les Lawrence. Suzanne Mess will be in charge of costumes.

For both young and old, "Hansel and Gretel", charming fairy-tale by Humperdinck, will be performed in English, with Dodi Protero and Mary McMurray taking the title roles. Conductor will be Dr. Ettore Mazzoleni.

"Rigoletto" by Verdi will have Louis Quilico, Enrico DiGiuseppe, Jan Rubes, Gwenlynn Little, Peter Van Ginkel and Mary McMurray in the cast. The opera will be conducted by Ernesto Barbini.

"Die Walkure", one of Richard Wagner's greatest works, will star Jon Vickers, Mary Simmons, Jan Rubes, Paul Schoeffler and Gladys Kuchta; conducted by TSO's Walter Susskind.

● The Red Barn Theater opens its fall season at Central Library Theater with "The Lesson" and "The Chairs" by Ionesco, on Tuesday, October 9th. Following this will be a new play by Samuel Beckett, "Happy Days," which will open on Wednesday, October 17th. Third play of the season will be "Mrs. Warren's Profession," by George Bernard Shaw, opening Wednesday, November 7th.

These three productions will run concurrently for a limited season, during which time each play will be performed at least twice a week, until, one by one, they are replaced by three new productions.

ENTERTAINMENT WORLD

● Molly Picon will have a leading role in the picture, "Come Blow Your Horn".

● This time the doctor didn't know best. Eddie Cantor's M.D. was averse to the idea — but he was consoled in his grief for Ida by his three cronies, Jack Benny, George Burns and Milton Berle.

● George Jessel's Israeli movie is being backed by the government. He is after Cyd Charisse to star.

● Phil Silvers is recovering from a muscular ailment he suffered while on movie location.

● In a Las Vegas golf match, Tony Bennett won a case of champagne from Dean Martin and Nat Cole.

● Concerning the right temperature for baby's bath, comic Rip Taylor advises: "Fill the tub with water and put baby in it. If baby turns red, it's too hot. If baby turns purple, it's too cold. If baby turns white, it needed a bath."

● Harry Golden, famous author and columnist of The Canadian Jewish News, and Carl Sandburg will make a two-some touring Israel.

● Frank Sinatra is upset since he heard that the Arab League had banned his films and records because of his activities in Israel during his world-tour last spring. He says he traveled to raise money for an inter-faith youth center in Nazareth, and he feels it unjustified for anyone to be condemned in wanting to help children of whatever faith or origin.

— Keep Smiling —

SO WHAT?

When Beryl arrived at the railroad station, he noticed his neighbor, Shmeryl, pacing the platform agitatedly.

"What's wrong?" asked Beryl. "You look upset."

"Plenty," answered Shmeryl. "Can you imagine, I missed my train by only three minutes."

"So what?" responded Beryl. "By the way you act, one would think you missed it by a whole hour."

IT HAPPENS ANYWHERE

The Yom Kippur eve services at the local synagogue were over. The cantor, who lived uptown, was ready to go home. He knew he would be severely criticized if his members saw him ride on this most sacred of days, therefore he walked a distance before he boarded the bus.

As the cantor entered the vehicle, the driver greeted him. "I want to congratulate you, Reverend," he said, "your Kol Nidre tonight was a knockout."

A view of the capacity audience which attended the gala Bond Dinner at Beth Tzedec on Tuesday evening, September 25.

TORONTO'S NEW RECORD

$1,800,000 PRESENTED AT DINNER

At one of the most outstandingly successful dinners ever held in Toronto, the 1962 Israel Bond Campaign received a record-breaking start climaxed by the presentation of a $1,800,000 cheque to Mr. Levi Eshkol, Minister of Finance of the State of Israel. Mr. Eshkol came to Toronto to join in the tribute of this community to one of its most popular and dedicated leaders, Leon E. Weinstein, chairman of the 1961 Israel Bond Campaign.

Introduced by His Excellency Ambassador Yaacov Herzog, Mr. Eshkol made a profound impression on the capacity audience with his vivid portrayal of Israel's newest step forward — conquest of the vast desert of the Negev. Mr. Eshkol painted vivid word pictures of the new towns springing to life in the neglected southern half of Israel, of the thousands of immigrant families who are finding there the possibility of leading again productive, useful, dignified lives, of the vast natural resources which are being uncovered below the desert sands and which will push Israel forward economically.

"Israel's future lies in the development of the Negev," Mr. Eshkol declared. "Attainment of this objective will not be easy. Much is still to be done, and your active participation in the bond program in Toronto is of decisive importance in achieving economic stability for Israel".

A major highlight of the dinner was the presentation to the guest of honor, Leon Weinstein, of the first "Plaque of the Negev", in recognition of his dedicated efforts in this cause. Presentation was made by J. Irving Oelbaum. Mr. Weinstein was also the recipient of a framed scroll, presented to him by Harry Pachter on behalf of Eglinton Lodge, B'nai B'rith, which recorded 70% Bond purchasers in the lodge in honor of Mr. Weinstein.

Chairman of the evening was Lawrence Shankman, 1962 Chairman of the Toronto Israel Bond Campaign. Presentation of the cheque to Mr. Eshkol to be honored at the close of the current Toronto Bond campaign was made by Leon Weinstein who pledged that our community will continue its partnership with our people in Israel which has already accomplished such miracles of progress through Israel Bond dollars.

Mr. and Mrs. Leon Weinstein with the tokens of tribute accorded during the gala Commendation Dinner.

ONE OF A KIND

By RUTHIE

Now that the New Year is here, one can't help but reflect upon the past. We don't know what the future has in store for us (the best, I hope), but we do know what was.

And among my many reflections, I become a bit heavy hearted when I think of the slow, but sure, demise of the Yiddish language.

When I was a child, I wouldn't have been caught dead speaking Yiddish. I was mad, and actually embarrassed, when Papa read a Yiddish newspaper in public. As I see it now, that feeling probably was brought on by the anti-Semitic atmosphere around us. It was difficult, for instance, to get a job if your name sounded remotely Jewish. We kids wanted so badly to be accepted in civic groups. Hence the assimilation and name-changing.

However, as the saying goes, the apple doesn't fall far from the tree. All the millions of mamas and papas stuck to their old, Jewish customs. And some of those rubbed off on us.

Now that we live in a new era, with a world of tragedy behind us, we face progress — which also includes, unfortunately, the death of a language one felt as well as spoke.

I remember one expression by the late Aaron Lebedeff, Yiddish stage star. Among his repertory of songs was, "Oi, I like she!"

We howled at the incorrect grammar. But it was how he said it that counted. His nuance, his twist of the words, spoke volumes. You had to hear him to understand it.

Then there was his pronunciation. Lebedeff was a Litvak. When a Galitzianer (Austrian) heard him — oh, boy! Voos (what) became vus; doos (this) became dus; Shabbos (Sabbath) became Sobbos. Tears rolled from laughter.

Can anyone forget Menashe Skulnik's mincing, curtsy steps? Mr. Skulnik has progressed to the English stage, but he will be remembered by his "Jewish" gestures.

There's no one who could simulate the deep, throaty, authoritative voice of the late Maurice Schwartz. Charles Laughton can't come up to him.

The dozens of expressions which connote a wealth of joy and heartache cannot be duplicated.

The one-syllabe word, nu, can describe innumerable things, depending upon one's interpretation. Nu can mean: so, so what, hurry, what's your hurry, okay, move over.

Then there's the sentence, "Voos (I'm a Galitzianer) iz gevayn, iz gevayn — 'siz mehr nisht doo" (what was, was — isn't anymore). It's not the sentence that matters, but the implication. Can you imagine what such a thought can trigger off?

A mother sighs and remembers her younger days. Perhaps a father thinks of the time when he was a gay, young blade unharried by any serious responsibility.

This can go on indefinitely. If I don't stop now, I may wind up like a slobbering jelly fish. So, here's to progress, and A Happy New Year.

HOLIDAY LEAVE FOR CANADIAN SOLDIERS

The Canadian Jewish Congress wrote to the Hon. Douglas S. Harkness, Minister of National Defense, submitting to him the dates of Rosh Hashanah, Yom Kippur and Sukkat, with the suggestion that orders be issued requesting that Jewish personnel in all branches of the Service be given leave to observe these holidays together with sufficient time to reach either their homes or the nearest community in order that they might properly observe these religious festivals and participate in religious services.

The offices of the Canadian Jewish Congress in Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver will be happy to facilitate arrangements for home hospitality and synagogue worship for such personnel as will be away from their homes.

Planning a Trip to India ? . . .

Do your eyes light up when you hear of someone just returned from or going to India — the fabulous, exotic sub-continent that has excited the minds of travelers since Marco Polo and Columbus? Have you not secretly longed to see for yourself this vast land with its temples, palaces, beautiful mountains, wild game reserves — a land where East not only meets West but also North and South.

Many people are now becoming interested in this new Asian giant and are planning to visit it either as an end destination or as a stop on their "round the world" trip. In order to investigate more fully the facilities for accommodation, transportation, and all the other features which clients of Dominion Travel require, our manager Murray Heifetz leaves this week on an extensive trip in which he will cover the country from Kashmir in the north to Mysore in the South.

On his return, Mr. Heifetz will be very pleased to discuss an Indian or Round the World trip with any person or group who may be planning such a trip. Please phone EM. 4-7331 to arrange appointments for any date after October 29th.

HALIFAX RABBI TO YESHIVA POST

NEW YORK, (CJN)—Rabbi Herbert C. Dobrinsky, spiritual leader of Beth Israel Synagogue, Halifax, N.S., since 1958 has been named assistant to the director of Yeshiva University's Community Service Division, Rabbi Morris H. Finer, director, announced today.

In addition to these duties he will serve as the Community Service Division's liason officer in Queens and Nassau Counties.

Born in Montreal on April 6, 1933, Rabbi Dobrinsky attended Mercaz Hatorah Rabbinical College and High School there before entering Yeshiva University High School for Boys, Manhattan, from which he graduated in 1950. He received the Bachelor of Arts degree from Yeshiva College in 1954 and was ordained at the University's Rabbi Isaac Elchanan Theological Seminary in 1957. In 1959 he was awarded the Master of Science degree in Education by Yeshiva University's Graduate School of Education.

TRAVEL TO RUSSIA

Intourist, the official Soviet Travel Agency, has advised Dominion Travel Office of their new programme for 1963. As in the past, Intourist have set up specific departure dates from May to September for tours varying from 5 - 18 days in length. The purpose of these tours is to guarantee departure of a group and enable an individual tourist to take advantage of the lower group fares within Russia. These tours will be available in both first and tourist classes.

During off-season (until April 30th 1963), Intourist will also provide a special pension rate for tourists which will enable them to travel in the country without the requirement of prepurchase of tours and other arrangements. The rates are $16.00 (U.S.) per day for first class pension and $13.00 (U.S.) per day for tourist pension. Fifteen major cities have facilities for receiving tourists on the basis of pension.

Dominion Travel Office are now accepting reservations for all Intourist tours for the coming winter and summer seasons.

HOMAGE TO FORMER ITALIAN PREMIER

ROME, (JCNS) — The Mayor of Rome, Signor Glauco Della Porta, on Sunday unveiled a statue, in the famous Pincio Gardens here, of Sydney Sonnino, the Italian Jewish leader who was Prime Minister of Italy before World War I.

The mayor outlined Sonnino's brilliant political career, his virtues and love of democracy, and said that the city of Rome was proud to perpetuate his memory by this offering.

DAWN

a novel by ELIE WIESEL the author of NIGHT

CHAPTER II

Elisha is my name. At the time of this story I was eighteen years old. Gad had recruited me for the Movement and brought me to Palestine. He had made me into a terrorist.

I had met Gad in Paris, where I went, straight from Buchenwald, immediately after the war. When the Americans liberated Buchenwald they offered to send me home, but I rejected the offer. I didn't want to relive my childhood, to see our house in foreign hands. I knew that my parents were dead and my native town was occupied by the Russians. What was the use of going back? "No thanks," I said; "I don't want to go home."

"Then where do you want to go?"

I said I didn't know; it didn't really matter.

After staying on for five weeks in Buchenwald I was put aboard a train for Paris. France had offered me asylum, and as soon as I reached Paris a rescue committee sent me for a month to a youth camp in Normandy.

When I came back from Normandy the same organization got me a furnished room on the rue de Marios and gave me grant which covered my living expenses and the cost of the French lessons which I took every day of the week except Saturday and Sunday from a gentleman with a mustache whose name I have forgotten. I wanted to master the language sufficiently to sign up for a philosophy course at the Sorbonne.

The study of philosophy attracted me because I wanted to understand the meaning of the events of which I had been the victim. In the concentration camp I had cried out in sorrow and anger against God and also against man, who seemed to have inherited only the cruelty of his creator. I was anxious to re-evaluate my revolt in an atmosphere of detachment, to view it in terms of the present.

So many questions obsessed me. Where is God to be found? In suffering or in rebellion? When is a man most truly a man? When he submits or when he refuses? Where does suffering lead him? To purification or to bestiality? Philosophy, I hoped, would give me an answer. It would free me from my memories, my doubts, my feeling of guilt. It would drive them away or at least bring them out in concrete form into the light of day. My purpose was to enroll at the Sorbonne and devote myself to this endeavor.

But I did nothing of the sort, and God was the one who caused me to abandon my original aim. If today I am only a question mark, he is responsible.

One evening there was a knock at my door. I went to open it, wondering who it could be. I had no friends or acquaintances in Paris and spent most of the time in my room, reading a book or sitting with my hand over my eyes, thinking about the past.

"I would like to talk with you."

The man who stood in the doorway was young, tall, and slender. Wearing a raincoat, he had the appearance of a detective or an adventurer.

"Come in," I said after he had already entered.

He didn't take off his coat. Silently he walked over to the table, picked up the few books that were there, riffled their pages, and then put them down. Then he turned to me.

"I know who you are," he said. "I know everything about you".

His face was tanned, expressive. His hair was unruly, one strand perpetually on his forehead. His mouth was hard, almost cruel; thus accentuating the kindness, the intensity, and warm intelligence in his eyes.

"You are more fortunate than I, for I know very little about myself."

A smile came to his lips. "I didn't come to talk about your past."

"The future," I answered, "is of limited interest to me." He continued to smile.

"The future," he asked, "are you attached to it?"

I felt uneasy. I didn't understand him. The meaning of his questions escaped me. Something in him set me on edge. Perhaps it was the advantage of his superior knowledge, for he knew who I was, although I didn't even know his name. He looked at me with such familiarity, such expectation, that for a moment I thought he had mistaken me for someone else, that it wasn't me he had come to see.

"Who are you?" I asked. "What do you want with me?"

"I am Gad," he said in a resonant voice, as if he were uttering some cabalistic sentence which contained an answer to every question. He said "I am Gad" in the same way that Jehovah said "I am that I am."

"Very good," I said with mingled curiosity and fear. "Your name is Gad. Happy to know you. And now that you've introduced yourself, may I ask the purpose of your call? What do you want of me?"

His piercing eyes seemed to look straight through me. After several moments of this penetrating stare he said in a quite matter-fact way:

"I want you to give me your future."

Having been brought up in the Hassidic tradition I had heard strange stories about the Meshulah, the mysterious messenger of fate to whom nothing is impossible. His voice is such as to make a man tremble, for the message it brings is more powerful than either the bearer or the recipient. His every word seems to come from the absolute, the infinite and its significance is at the same time fearful and fascinating. Gad is a Meshulah, I said to myself. It was not his physical appearance that gave me this impression, but rather what he said and the way he said it.

"Who are you?' I asked again, in terror.

Something told me that at the end of the road we were to travel together I should find another man, very much like myself, whom I should hate.

"I am a messenger," he said.

I felt myself grow pale. My premonition was correct. He was a messenger, a man sent by fate, to whom I could refuse nothing. I must sacrifice everything to him, even hope, if he asked it.

"You want my future?" I asked. "What will you do with it?"

He smiled again, but in a cold, distant manner, as one who possesses a power over men.

"I'll make it into an outcry,' he said, and there was a strange light in his dark eyes. "An outcry first of despair and then of hope. And finally a shout of triumph."

I sat down on my bed, offering him the only chair in the room, but he remained standing. In the Hassidic legends the messenger is always portrayed standing, as if his body must at all times serve as a connecting link between heaven and earth. Standing thus, in a trench coat which seemed as if it had never been taken off and were an integral part of his body, with his head inclined toward his right shoulder and a fiery expression in his eyes, he proceeded to tell me about the Movement.

He smoked incessantly. But even when he paused to light a cigarette he continued to stare obliquely at me and never stopped talking. He talked until dawn, and I listened as a child to the grizzled master who revealed to me the mysterious universe of the Cabala, where every idea is a story and every story, even one concerned with the life of a ghost, is a spark from eternity.

That night Gad told me about Palestine and the age-old Jewish dream of recreating an independent homeland, one where every human act would be free. He told me also of the Movement's desperate struggle with the English.

"The English government has sent a hundred thousand soldiers to maintain so-called order. We of the Movement are no more than a hundred strong, but we strike fear into their hearts. Do you understand what I am saying? We cause the English—yes, the English—to tremble!" The sparks in his dark eyes lit up the fear of a hundred thousand uniformed men.

This was the first story I had ever heard in which the Jews were not the ones to be afraid. Until this moment I had believed that the mission of the Jews was to represent the trembling of history rather than the wind which made it tremble.

"The paratroopers, the police dogs, the tanks, the planes, the tommy guns, the executioners—they are all afraid. The Holy Land has become, for them, a land of fear. They don't dare walk out on the streets at night, or look a young girl in the eye for fear that she may shoot them in the belly, or stroke the head of a child for fear that he may throw a hand grenade in their face. They dare neither to speak nor to be silent. They are afraid.

MY ONLY BOSS... THE CUSTOMER...

by Harry Guest

Merchandising director of POWER supermarkets

As Director of Merchandising .for Power Super Markets, my prime function is to give our customers exactly what they want. That is why you will find a bigger variety of top quality foods at your "Friendly Power Store" than at any other Food Market in Toronto.

Power "Garden-Fresh" Fruits and Vegetables are quality controlled, received fresh daily after being carefully chosen by our expert Produce Department Buyers.

Our "Quality-Controlled" Meat Department has been the talk of Toronto for years. Government Inspected, carefully and expertly chosen Meats are properly aged, expertly cut and sold to you at "The Peak of Perfection".

To give the best always ... for less ...is not an easy task, but I think we're succeeding. What do you think?

Your suggestions, comments and criticisms are always welcome ..... Make Power Markets your Markets.

Sincerely yours,
HARRY GUEST
DIRECTOR OF MERCHANDISING.
